PARNELL AND THE "TIMES."

The Thunderer Calls Upon the Land League to Prosecute it.

LETTER FROM P. J. TYNAN.

Davitt Publicly Challenges the Government to Place Parnell and Himself on Trial.

A last (Sunday) night's London cable says: The Times, in its summary of its own case, says: "We have declared our readiness to produce documents showing close relations between Messrs. Parnell and Egan in regard to the expenditure of Land League funds; showing that Carey, the leader of the Invincibles, was paid by Mr. Egan, and was urged by him to get 'to work and give us value for money'; showing that Parnell, when in Kilmainham jail, was angry at the 'inexcusable action' of his friends outside, and reminded Egan that he had undertaken to 'make it hot for old Foster & Company,' and called on him to give some evidence of his power to do so; showing that when Frank Byrne fled from the kingdom to avoid trial on the charge of complicity in the Phœnix Park murders it was Mr. Parnell who supplied funds for his escape; and finally showing that Mr. Parnell has repeated more than once, in apologetic letters addressed to members of the extreme wing of the party, curious admissions contained in a document we published in fac simile on the 18th of April, 1887. We have brought them forward, however, under the fullest sense of public responsibility and with perfect readiness that they should be sifted to the bottom. If our attacks on men who have risen to political influence through their connection with the Land League and National League have been determined and resolute, they have, also, as the Lord Chief Justice told the jury, been plainly and frankly made. We are prepared, when the proper time shall arrive, to prove all that Sir Richard Webster stated on behalf of the Times in O'Connell's case. The more we have inquired into the history of these dark transactions, the more we are convinced that our charges are rooted in truth and justice. It is not a farcical action like O'Donnell's, whether prompted by vanity or any other motive, that will clear up the obscurity which is discreditable to English public life, and is only rendered denser by irresponsible and unsupported denials. The ends of justice can only be attained by an investigation, in which the persons incriminated can be subjected to the ordinary tests of truthfulness and compelled to give the fullest information about the expenditure of the funds of the Land League and National League, as well as about their relations, as proved by the documents in our possession, with criminal conspirators who are now, for good reasons, voluntary outlaws."

The Times retorts upon him this morning with two long articles, and makes its points sharply enough. Mr. Parnell based his denial in part upon the theory that Mr. Egan's letter to Carey was admittedly found by the police in Carey's house, and that police evidence was worthless. No, says his accuser, that was not alleged and is not admitted. Mr. Parnell says that his "Dear E." letter about "making it hot for Forster" is alleged to be in the handwriting of his secretary, Mr. Campbell. It was not so alleged, answers the Times, the Attorney-General expressly said that he did not know whose handwriting it was. Mr. Parnell told the House that he had been two days in court ready to give evidence. Yes, replies the Times, you were there on a subpœna, and would have had to go to jail if you had not obeyed the summons of the court. "The signature to the fac simile letter," says Mr. Parnell, "is one I had not used since 1879." "But you told the House last year," cries the Times, "that this signature was an audacious fabrication, containing only two letters that bore any resemblance to any letters in your own signature!" And the Times winds up with a fresh challenge to Mr. Parnell to bring an action for libel. Other Unionist journals think that in no other way can the issue be fairly tried.

In his speech at the Irish demonstration at Glasgow yesterday Michael Davitt, referring to O'Donnell's libel suit against the Times, said it had been hinted that there was collusion between O'Donnell and the Times. This charge, he said, was entirely unjust and untrue. On the contrary, O'Donnell had pursued the course taken by him against his own judgment and will, and on his (Mr. Davitt's) advice, along with that of some Nationalists, who believed that the case would receive an impartial hearing before some British judge. They had been grievously disappointed. Surely Chief Justice Coleridge, when he discovered that there was no case on which to go to the jury, ought to have prevented Attorney-General Webster from trying to make out a charge against men who were not in court, and who had no means of defending themselves. The excuse of the Times that the lives of their informants would not be safe if they were brought forward was absurd and an insult to common sense. The real danger was that the informants themselves would be placed in the dock on the charge of forgery. The Attorney-General's assertion that he could prove the charges contained in the Times' articles on "Parnellism and Crime" made the taking of further action inevitable. But by whom was such action to be taken? If the letters alleged to have been written by Mr. Parnell were genuine; if the Attorney-General, as a law officer of the Crown, really held proof sufficient to convict Mr. Parnell, the speaker, and others of conspiracy to murder, it was his duty to place them in the dock. (Cheers.) He challenged the Attorney-General to adopt such a course. If the latter did not take up the challenge, as given from a public platform, he (Mr. Davitt) would put it in a letter, giving the Attorney-General the alternative either of admitting that there was no proof with which to substantiate the charges, or of forcing the Government to place on trial Mr. Parnell and himself. If the Government did not put them in the dock it would be because they knew that the allegations were but the weapons of cowardly moral assassinators. This was the only way in which the charges could be sifted to the bottom and the truth be made known to the people of Great Britain and Ireland. (Cheers.) There could be no shirking the issue.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The New York Sunday Herald has the following card: The announcement made so publicly in this morning's Herald, that I have been in collusion with the enemy's organ, the London Times, is a foul and unnatural slander. I wish to give it the most unqualified contradiction. This statement is said to have proceeded from the Parnellites. I ask these gentlemen to as publicly relieve themselves of the odium cast upon them by the enemies' press in publishing this malicious falsehood. This organ of persecution, the London Times, has openly advocated the destruction of the Irish race, as it has the slaughter of other hostile peoples. In pursuit of its bitter hatred toward Ireland it has published certain statements about Irishmen, members of the British Parliament, with the deliberate object of setting a trap for these men, whom it honored by assailing. Several of them fell into the ambush so skilfully laid, and have aided the London Times by slandering the memory of dead Irish patriots. I wish to state here publicly that I pass no opinion whatever on the truth or falsehood of the question dragged into the enemy's court by an ex-Irish Provincialist. I feel satisfied that the London Times is not in possession of any of the actual facts, and that it is the dupe of some mercenary wretch. Should the true history of the historic event in Dublin ever see the light of day, mankind will not wonder that Ireland is still an enslaved nation.

SHE BEAT HIM BAD.

The Young School Ma'am Wouldn't Stand Chaff from a Pupil.

A Barrie despatch says: A case of unusual interest was up before Mayor Ross and H. Bird, J. P., at the Police Court on Saturday morning, in which a young lady teacher in a school in the township of Vespra was charged with assaulting a pupil by the name of J. McBride in an unmerciful manner. It appears the young lady has a certain admirer of the sterner sex, and to him the boy McBride uttered some uncalled-for expressions regarding them, and he in turn intimated to his ladylove what the boy had said. The remarks were not choice and provoked her to such an extent that the following morning, Wednesday last—the boy was ahead of the others coming to school—she locked him up in the room with her and flogged him across the back with a beech gad in such a violent manner as to make the boy ill. When he returned to his home he informed his parents of what had happened, and on the following morning the lad's brother laid an information against the teacher, Miss Annie Nicholson, of the Separate School, on the 9th concession. On Thursday morning the parties appeared at the Police Court here. The boy made a statement of the case and showed the Magistrates the wounds on his back, which were numerous and very painful. In some places the flesh was quite swollen. The teacher pleaded guilty to the charge, whereupon the Mayor imposed a fine of $10 and costs. While the young lad had many sympathizers it was regretted that the young lady had not taken other means of punishing McBride for his offence.

FATALITIES IN TORONTO.

Died from Lockjaw—A Terrible Leap—Boy Drowned.

A despatch from Toronto says: Thos. Kenny, a boarder in Boylan's hotel, West Market street, while in a fit of delirium jumped out of a second story window on Saturday and died shortly afterwards.

The 5-year-old son of John Gilding, laborer, Anderson street, while playing on the waterworks dock Saturday night fell into the bay and was drowned. The body was recovered yesterday morning.

Samuel Richardson, 214 Lippincott street, a lad of about 13 years, died on Friday night from lockjaw. A few days before, while playing with another colored lad, he fell upon a sharp-pointed stick, which entered the calf of his leg. The sock becoming saturated with blood, some of the dye stuff entered the wound and caused blood poisoning. On Thursday the sufferer was seized with lockjaw, from which he died after 24 hours' agony.

Drought in Eastern Ontario.

KINGSTON, July 9.—The country in this section and in Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Prince Edward and Leeds is suffering on account of drought. The hay crop is a perfect failure. Prince Edward farmers estimate that they will have to import 1,000 tons for their own use. Other crops, even if rain should now come, will only be one-third of the average. Bush fires in some places continue to do great damage to crops and fencing. The situation is critical for the farmer, and it is viewed with alarm by business men.

Port Arthur News.

PORT ARTHUR, July 9.—Two hundred men are employed in the construction of the new river elevator.

There has been another rich find in the shaft in the west end of Silver Mountain mine.

Real estate is in fair demand. The town is filling with visitors.

There were 3,171 immigrants who passed Port Arthur during June. Over 50 per cent. more than in 1887.

Smothered in a Sand Heap.

MONTREAL, July 9.—A young boy named D. Burns, 6 years of age, disappeared from his home Saturday on Clemen street. Search was made all day yesterday, but without success till this morning, when his dead body was found in a big heap of sand at the end of Ontario street. He had been smothered to death.

A Wealthy Widower Suicides.

PETERBORO', July 9.—Robert Northcote aged about 65, well known and respected and reputed generally to be wealthy, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor on Saturday night. Threatened litigations are said to have been the cause of the deed. He was a widower and lived alone, a married daughter having her residence close by.

A SOO TRAGEDY.

Four Persons Burned to Death in a Farm Building

SAD ACCIDENT TO THE SURVIVOR

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 7.—The farm house of George Dobbs, located seven miles from here, on the Canadian side of the river, was burned early yesterday morning. Four of the inmates, George Dobbs, aged 72; David Merrifield, aged 21; Alice Thomson, aged 9, and another child, perished in the flames. The fire started from a smudge and when discovered by Mrs. Dobbs, who is 70 years old, it was beyond control. Mrs. Dobbs quickly awoke her husband and Mr. Merrifield, and descended to the lower floor. While groping about in the stifling smoke she stumbled and fell through a trap door into the cellar and from there made her escape to the open air. The two men failed to find any means of exit, fell back into the flames and were consumed. The children were asleep in another part of the house and were suffocated. The woman, who had no time to put on any clothing, lay exposed to the chilly air until morning, when her cries attracted the attention of a neighbor. There is little hope for her recovery.

A MORMON BISHOP.

How a Salt Lake Refugee Surprised the Citizens of Lunenberg, N.S.

A Lunenberg, N.S., despatch says: Chester has had during the past week a genuine sensation. About six weeks ago there arrived from parts unknown a white-haired old patriarch and three very vivacious young ladies. One was introduced as his better half, the others as his wife's sisters. The ladies were invited everywhere, and when not accompanied by the old man had a good time. About a week ago the youngest became infatuated with one of our young men, and, in a moment of confidence, disclosed the fact that the old patriarch was a Mormon bishop, a refugee from Salt Lake, Utah, and that all the women were, according to the rites of the Mormon Church, his wives. The next thing to an impossibility is to keep a secret in Chester, so the whole matter leaked out. The "bishop" got wind of the affair, and with his three wives skipped out on Saturday night at 10 o'clock for Windsor.

Brantford News Notes.

BRANTFORD, July 8.—At a special meeting of the Public School Board held Friday evening it was decided to introduce the kindergarten system in Brantford. Mrs. Wylie, of Toronto, late of Chicago, was engaged as instructress and directress out of a large number of applicants.

George Leach, a member of a respectable family, but himself a dissolute character, was fined on Friday at the Police Court $5 or two months, and given time to pay. Leach celebrated his liberty by forging his brother's name to an order, and securing a ham from a merchant named Cammell. This ham he sold for 75 cents to a boarding house keeper, and then again got on a drunk. He was re-arrested Friday evening, and yesterday morning sentenced to 22 months in Central Prison.

Before Judge Jones yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock George Campbell was arraigned to receive sentence on a charge of attempted rape of a Hamilton girl. His Honor at first sentenced Campbell to four months' imprisonment, but before the sentence was recorded it was pointed out by the Crown Attorney that the Consolidated Statutes made the offence punishable by a sentence of not less than two years nor more than seven. The judge, having at first pronounced sentence acting on the old statute, decided to let matters remain in statu quo until he can communicate with the Minister of Justice and see whether there is not a clerical error in the Consolidated Statutes.

More Miraculous Cures.

A Montreal despatch says: Reports of miraculous cures at the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre now continue to be of daily occurrence. The annual pilgrimage of the Irish Catholic parishioners of St. Ann's parish, under the direction of the Redemptorist Fathers, took place on Saturday last, and was attended by over four hundred persons. The pilgrims returned to the city yesterday morning, and report that an extraordinary miracle was performed on one of their number. A young girl named Nellie McCarthy, who is about 12 years old, has been suffering for the last four or five years from hip disease, and was obliged to carry two crutches. She accompanied the pilgrims on Saturday, and returned yesterday morning perfectly cured, having left her crutches behind her at the shrine. The young girl lives with her mother, who is a widow, on Murray street, in this city, and is naturally in great joy at the wonderful recovery.

Elopers Arrested.

A despatch from Topeka, Kansas, says: The eloping couple from St. Louis, Henry W. Moore and Mrs. John W. Norton, were arrested at the Copeland House in this city this afternoon, upon a telegram from the St. Louis Chief of Police. The warrant upon which Moore was arrested charges him with the larceny of $15,000 in money and a diamond ring, a scarf pin and a collar button, the property of John W. Norton. It is understood that the latter will institute proceedings with a view of placing his wife in an insane asylum.

Serious Charge Against a Contractor.

SARNIA, July 10.—Chief Sherwood, of the Secret Service Department, with an assistant, drove to Thedford during last night and arrested W. O. Parsons, a prominent contractor, on a charge of counterfeiting. Parsons was brought here this morning and remanded for one week. There was found in his house and on his person about $600 in bills and American silver. Parsons is alleged to be mixed up in the counterfeiting work on which Chas. Johnston, now in jail here, is held.

Helped Himself and Died.

A Lacona, N. H., despatch says: George M. Smith helped himself to what he supposed was brandy at Odell's drug store in Lakeville to-day. Ten minutes later he dropped dead. He had taken a poison that paralyzed the nerves.

THE TORONTO TRAGEDY.

A Pretty Girl's Illicit Amours Lead to Remorse and a Terrible End.

THIS MORNING'S DEVELOPMENTS.

A Toronto despatch says: Upwards of 2,000 people visited the morgue yesterday to gaze on the face of the poor unknown girl whose body was fished out of the bay on Saturday. No one knew who she was, and when night came her identity was as great a mystery as ever. Mrs. Allen Glassey, of Mission avenue, informed Inspector Stark last evening that she believed the young woman now lying at the morgue was Jennie Brown, of Walkerton, who lived with her up to Friday last. An Empire reporter called at No. 10 Mission avenue late last night and was met at the door by a woman about 25 years of age, and rather good looking, who said that she was Mrs. Allen Glassey. She invited the caller into the parlor, and with her sister, Mrs. Edward Glassey, told a story of domestic infelicity, in which the misdoings of an unfaithful husband and the moral weakness of a young girl were prominent features. She said that her sister, Mrs Edward Glassey, whose husband died four months ago, earned a livelihood by taking boarders there. She lived with her and increased her income by working as a dressmaker. Her husband, Allen Glassey, who is about 25 years of age, was employed in a flour mill at Norval, Halton county. About two weeks ago a young and rather handsome girl came to the house and applied for a situation. She said that she understood dressmaking and Mrs. Glassey decided to give her a trial. The girl worked in the house for a week, long enough to convince Mrs. Glassey that her knowledge of the art of dressmaking was very limited. Accordingly Mrs. Glassey discharged her at the end of the week, but as she had no place to go to she was permitted to remain in the house until she should secure another situation. Glassey came home from his work on Saturday night and remained until it was necessary for him to leave the house. During Sunday Mrs. Glassey and her sister noticed that there appeared to be a familiarity between her husband and Jennie. Mrs. Edward Glassey remarked it to her sister and suggested that the quicker they got her away the better. On Monday, which was Dominion Day, the girl went on an excursion to Buffalo with a young man of her acquaintance and returned in the evening. She remained all day Tuesday, and so did Glassey, the intimacy becoming more apparent all the time. The climax came that night. Owing to developments testified to by her sister, Mrs. Glassey turned the girl out of doors, and Glassey went, too. Together they went down the street, and Mrs. Glassey has seen nothing of her husband since. On Thursday an expressman called at 10 Mission avenue and stated that he had been instructed to convey the girl's two trunks to 28 Park road, where she was then living. Mrs. Glassey refused to allow the trunks to be removed from the house, as the girl's clothes had not been packed. Then the wronged wife, who had determined to procure a separation from her husband, set out to find the girl. She called at 28 Park road and met Jennie. After a conversation Jennie said that her name was not Brown, but Irving, and that she came from Walkerton four years ago. Her parents had died while she was quite young, but she had an uncle who was a clergyman living in Walkerton. She confessed her sin and at Mrs. Glassey's request put it in writing. It reads:

TORONTO, July 5, 1888.

This is to certify that Allen Glassey has not been true to his wife. He came to me on Sunday night, the first of July, and forced me to go away with him, and also on Tuesday night, when we were caught by Mrs. Glassey's sister. He also told me he did not love his wife, and made me promise to go away with him. He also took a diamond ring that I had which belonged to another young man. My proper name is Jenny Irving. When I went to Mrs. Glassey's I called myself Miss Brown.

She seemed to manifest a contrite spirit and wept over her wrong-doings.

"Now I'm disgraced I will go down and throw myself in the bay," sobbed the poor girl.

"Don't do that, Jenny," said Mrs. Glassey, "for you must not die before your sins are forgiven."

Mrs. Glassey hurried down to police headquarters with the written confession, and presenting it to one of Police Court Clerk Meyerfey's assistants asked, on the strength of it, to have a warrant issued for the arrest of her husband. The official laughed at her and told her that the confession without being sworn to was worthless. She returned to 28 Park road to get Miss Irving to subscribe her oath to her statement, but the girl had disappeared. Mrs. Glassey never saw her alive again.

From the description of the body in the morgue given by the reporter Mrs. Glassey was convinced that the dead girl was none other than Jennie Irving. At the reporter's suggestion she consented to go down to the dead house and look at the remains. Accordingly a carriage was procured and with her sister, Miss Hamilton, and the reporter Mrs. Glassey was driven to the morgue at 1 o'clock this morning.

The moment the party entered the damp and dripping room where the body lay on a marble slab Mrs. Glassey exclaimed:

"That's Jennie! That's her, poor Jennie!"

As soon as they saw the dark brown dress with plaid trimmings they were sure the body was that of Jennie Irving. Another look at the face left no doubt of it. As they left the morgue and re-entered the carriage Mrs. Glassey remarked, "Well, I'm glad that we parted friends. I never thought the poor girl would be dead so soon."

It is now asserted that the deceased had an appointment for Friday night with a commercial traveller named Harry Hartley. This was the night previous to her death. The police are therefore looking for this young man to get his story. It will be recollected that on that night several persons saw a young man walking with a girl answering Jennie's description on the Esplanade in the neighborhood of where the body was found.

HOAR ON THE FISH QUESTION.

He Bitterly Attacks the Treaty—Eulogizes Canada, and Talks of British Aggression and American Forbearance.

A Washington despatch says: Senator George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, delivered his long-threatened address on the fisheries question in the Senate yesterday afternoon. The speech in the form of a public document makes over sixty closely printed pages, besides which the Senator felt impelled to add a summary not contained in the printed document.

Mr. Hoar's address was a plea for the protection of the American fishermen, because the fishermen are the only portion of the nation that maintain unimpaired their fighting quality during a long peace. "We pay," said Mr. Hoar, "$60,000 a year for West Point and Annapolis. Canada exported from the produce of her fisheries in 1887 a value of $6,843,388; of this we took nearly a million and a half. Every dollar of that was a payment to our great rival, to our only possible enemy, towards the support of a naval school to which Annapolis or Greenwich is quite unimportant. The desire of Canada and Great Britain to contract within the least possible limits the fishing ground to which America shall have access, and to possess themselves without obstruction of the calling which brings to this great American market its supply of fish for food and oils, has a vastly larger purpose than a mere struggle for a profitable industry, important as that may be."

He said the Fisheries Treaty is not the road to honor, to safety or to peace; it is not the road to the respect of Great Britain or even of Canada. Where it removes one cause of discord it will produce ten new grievances. Adherence to treaties and submission to the judgments of duly constituted courts in the interpretation of treaties will give us security. We can never have Commercial Reciprocity until justice and courtesy are first established. We can never live in peace with Canada if we allow her to think that the methods she has taken for the last three years are the way to concessions from us. We can never live in peace with England if we permit her, without prompt and instant protest, to try once more the experiments on our forbearance which preceded the Revolution, which preceded the war of 1812, which accompanied the war of the Rebellion. The rejection of this treaty is in the interest of a true, thorough and lasting peace. We have every motive—of kindred, of friendship and of commercial interest—to live in amity with the Mother Country and with the Young Power which is rising on our northern boundary, whose frontier, for more than 50 degrees of longitude, marches side by side with our own. We look with no contempt or dislike upon Canada. We are glad to see the spirit of her young nationality stirring in her veins; we behold with admiration the growth of her magnificent railroad system and the courage and enterprise with which her statesmen are adding these new links to the chain which England, like a mighty snake, is winding her coils about the globe. Sir Charles Tupper and Sir John Macdonald may well give lessons to both sides of this Chamber. She is not afraid to create or to control the great railroads that are essential to her commercial prosperity. She does not send away her famous engineers when they place their genius at her command, humbled and baffled, from her Legislative Chamber to die in sorrow and disappointment. She is not afraid to build a ship railway, or even to create a navy, but when she asks us to abandon our fishermen to her tender mercies, to build up a naval school for her by giving her fishermen our market, she asks what it is neither fitting for us to yield nor for her to receive. I do not like the present treaty. It leaves the American sailor to be bullied and insulted without redress and abandons the American right to the fisheries, older than the nation itself, which the valor of our fathers won for us and the wisdom of our fathers preserved for us.

An allusion by the Speaker to the lack of special ability on the part of the American negotiators of the treaty was taken up and contested by Senators Payne and Gray. Mr. Hoar thought that if Messrs. Frye, Scott or Woodbury had been selected as the American representatives a more satisfactory treaty would have been agreed upon. At the close of his speech Mr. Hoar was complimented by a number of Senators on his side of the House.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS WRECKED.

Two Employees Seriously Hurt and Several Animals Killed.

A Fall River, Mass., despatch says: At 2 o'clock this morning four cars of the rear section of Forepaugh's circus transportation train bound for Newport were wrecked south of the dark tunnel under Central street in this city. The third car of the section was derailed and the three following cars were piled on top of it. Three men were in the third car, of whom Frank Hogan, of New Britain, Conn., and John Wood, of Boston, were injured, the latter seriously. They were cut out of the ruins and taken to Wilbur's hotel. The third man, Thomas Williams, of New York, escaped. Dandy, a trick horse, was killed. A stallion and a racing mare were so badly hurt that they had to be shot. The wreck was cleared away by 7 o'clock and the company went on. Two cars were ruined and abandoned.

Fatal Fall From a Window.

WINNIPEG, July 8.—R. A. Hasken, a well-known Winnipegger, recently returned from England, and formerly a member of the firm of A. Colquhoun & Co., wholesale liquor dealers, fell from a third-story window of the Leland House Saturday morning. He was instantly killed, his head striking the sidewalk. His parents live at Pontapool, Eng.

Struck by a Huge Wave.

A New York despatch says: Captain Young, of the steamship City of Rome, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, reports that on Sunday last during a strong west gale the steamer shipped a huge sea which carried away the bowsprit and stove in the forward bridge, seriously injuring the seamen on duty.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Big Blaze at Bowmanville—Old Man Burned to Death.

BELLEVILLE, July 8.—On Saturday afternoon an old man named Mathew Leonard, residing on the 9th concession of Tyendinaga, went out to fire some stumps. Some time later a neighbor passing found the fence burning and began to tear it down. While so engaged he heard groans, and, on looking about, discovered Leonard lying on the ground with his clothing burnt nearly off and his legs and the lower part of his body burnt almost to a cinder. Assistance was at once obtained, but too late, and Leonard shortly after breathed his last. How the accident occurred will never be known, but it is surmised that he fell in a fit, and when his clothing caught fire was unable to help himself, and so perished, after suffering the most terrible agony.

KINGSTON, July 7.—There are fires in the north of the county, and the smoke from them to-day enveloped the river and Bay of Quinte and interfered with the navigation of them.

BOWMANVILLE, July 7.—A fire broke out this afternoon in the shed of the Alma Hotel and rapidly spread, catching the school-room of the Trinity Church. Strenuous but unavailing efforts were made to save this building—without exception the handsomest church of its size in the Dominion. It is now a ruin. The high wind prevailing rapidly drove the flames on to the Alma Hotel. The wind, being from the northwest, carried the flames and cinders south of the Dominion Organ Company's lumber yards. All attention was given to protect this, as if the fire had gotten into the large piles of lumber it would have been difficult to save the factory. These efforts were successful. Fire broke out in one or two places in the eastern part of the town, but through the exertions of the citizens and fire companies they were rapidly extinguished. The Oshawa Fire Brigade is on its way down.

A later despatch says: Further danger is past. The Oshawa fire engine is here. The result of the fire is as follows: The Alma Hotel, Trinity (Congregational) Church, the residence of Mrs. Shaw, and the outbuildings of David Fisher are totally destroyed. The church is insured for $4,000.

The town of Berber, in Jomailland, has been burned to the ground. Forty persons, mostly children, invalids and cripples, perished.

KINGSTON, July 9.—The Rathbuns, of Deseronto, lose about $35,000 by the destruction of the chemical works on Sunday. It was probably a case of spontaneous combustion. The works, which have been burned the second time, will be rebuilt at once of terra cotta. The manufacture of chemicals is now paying handsomely, but only after great expenditure in perfecting the system of distillation.

LINDSAY, July 9.—On Saturday evening a very disastrous fire raged at Corson's siding, on the Midland Railway, destroying the station and everything in the vicinity of it. The property destroyed consisted of 4,000 telegraph poles, an immense quantity of cedar posts and ties, several thousand cords of wood, a large quantity of lumber, together with Decatur's steam saw mill and outbuildings, also Captain Corson's coal-house, with several hundred bushels of coal. The loss is roughly estimated at $10,000, and so far as can be learned there is no insurance. The fire was caused by a spark being carried by the wind from bush fires two miles distant.

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 9.—The residence of Joshua Hodgkins, at Deer Lake, Mich., was burned yesterday morning. Mrs. Hodgkins, aged 62, while attempting to rescue a servant, was fatally burned. Loss, $5,000.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., July 10.—The town to-day had a narrow escape from another calamity. The woods on the southwest side of the lumber yards of Messrs. Mickle, Dyment & Sons, Mr. Isaac Cockburn, and Messrs. Thomson & Baker, are on fire and the lumber was more than once in flames, but the prompt arrival of the engine confined the fire to one pile, which was destroyed.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

Grievances of Catholic Prelates—Mr. Mandeville's Death.

A London cable says: Mr. O'Brien called the attention of the Government to the resolutions of the Catholic prelates of Ireland in reference to grievances, demanding immediate legal redress, and asked if the Government would take any measures to give effect to their representations. He also asked whether the Government had received any communications direct or indirect from the Pope in reference to Ireland.

Mr. Balfour, on behalf of the Government, replied that he was not aware of any representations from the Irish prelates, but if they had been made from such quarters they would receive them and give them respectful attention.

Mr. William O'Brien, who was confined with Mr. Mandeville in Tullamore jail, says that his death was entirely due to his treatment in prison. The story, as Mr. O'Brien tells it, reads almost like a tale of the Inquisition. Mandeville submitted to the authorities, but refused absolutely to wear the convict garb, and to break his will they put him on bread and water in solitary confinement for weeks. But though he sickened he would not yield. They made several attempts to steal his clothes, but failed. Finally the governor and six warders attacked him in his cell one night, bound him, and tore and cut all his clothes off, except one shirt. He wrapped himself in a sheet, and still on a bread and water diet walked his cell steadily for 24 hours to keep warm, as it was midwinter. Then they took the sheet from him, and he put on the prison clothes. He lost 50 lbs. in weight while in prison, and was broken down in health ever since.

Fined for Diluting Milk.

BELLEVILLE, July 4.—Mr. Flint, P. M., gave judgment to-day in the milk case preferred by Inspector Witton. Robert Dowling and S. E. Grooms, residents of Richmond, were the defendants, and were heavily fined for diluting milk sent to the factory. The fines and costs amounted to $129.90. The prosecutions are under the new Ontario Act, and the Dairymen's Association are making an effort to stamp out the long existing evil.
